

Love Struck by Mackenzie Helms

Ahh, Valentine's Day, my favorite holiday of the year! Going around the world with my special arrows, shooting people right and left, aiming for a very undesirable spot, just for fun of course! I need something to entertain me you know! Although, these dazed and lost "head-over-heels" look is a pretty funny site. Oh, and if you can't tell by now, the name's Cupid and I just love February 14th.

This year I have some very special plans. So many people are used to my boring conventional ways of finding the perfect pair, hitting them both in the tush with a love-dipped arrow and being on my way, but I've gotten a bit bored of that. I've decided to do something more entertaining, well at least for me. I'm sick of never getting any credit for all the lovely work I do, setting people up with "the one" and chemistry getting the credit for it? No way am I gonna sit back and let people explain their feelings with it any longer! This year, I have plans for everyone, especially those ungrateful idiots who never gave me the credit I deserve. I've prepared some special arrows for this year, sets of two, one for a human, and one for an animal of my choice. Let's see how you like falling for a slug this year! And maybe, if you're lucky, I'll cancel the effects after a day. I expect endless gratitude from there on out though, or else people will rue the day they ever crossed Cupid!

So watch out this Valentine's Day or you may end up on a romantic date with a toad! Toodles for now, darlings, but I expect no less than hand written notes of gratitude for all my hard work delivered to me if you ever expect to be paired with your one true love any time in the future!

Valentine's Day Expenses By Noelys Almodovar

In the spirit of Valentine's Day the journalism class went around campus and took a poll on the expenses of Valentine's Day. The poll consisted of asking boys how much they expect to be spent on them and asking girls how much they expect boys to spend on them. Some of the results may surprise you on how much boys and girls think they are worth on this special day we call Valentine's Day.

To: Cooper Chaplin,

You're the sweet to my Hershey's bar, every time I see you my heart skips a beat. So sad it's your last year, once you're gone I am going to feel like a little girl that has lost her puppy. Your eyes are like almonds and you make me smile J

You're a munchkin; your eyes are beautiful like the deep blue sea. Your hair like the sand on the beach, your beautiful face like a new plumped tomato newly grown from a beautiful tree. She was beautiful for the sparkle in her eye when she talked about something she loved.

She was beautiful deep down to her soul.
